At irregular intervals, Catherine sent Vincent another magnet memento. He regarded the three he had placed on the metal sheet. Now a fourth sat on his large callused palm. They were unexpectedly thought-provoking.

This one was round and made of wood, with a burned image of a wolf peeking around a tree trunk.

Although there were no wolves in Central Park, there were lots of trees and himself, as dangerous as any wolf, in his own way.

Where did Catherine buy these things? She was being very mysterious. His curiosity was now extreme - and she knew it. He sighed.
