

Skagen

by Angie

Me again,

Thought you might enjoy one of the stranger places I went to. This place is on the northernmost tip of Denmark. To this tourist, it seems to be fixated somewhat on sand.

Yes, sand.

The white building is a church built on sand, where its predecessor was buried under sand dunes. The other is a tourist train to the very end of a sandy spit to look at, you guessed it, sand. Ocean too, of course.

Everything sparkling and shiny, but nothing compared to our waterfall below with the sun on it.

Am I getting a little homesick?
