

Elliot's Girl

by Judith

"Hi, Linda. It's been too long." Edward hugged her tightly. "How've you been?"

"Better now, than I was back then." Linda's face expressed regret. "Therapy helped me understand myself." She looked around the convention room, filling with eager fans. "There was a time when something like this would have made me want to run."

"They've all come to meet Elliot's girl," Edward teased with a winsome smile.

Linda tilted her head. "Don't you mean, Vincent's girl?"

"Never heard of him." Edward's smile turned conspiratorial.

"Well, he's right here." A powerful hand fell heavily onto Edward's shoulder. "Hands off my Catherine."